

Bulletin #1/2008

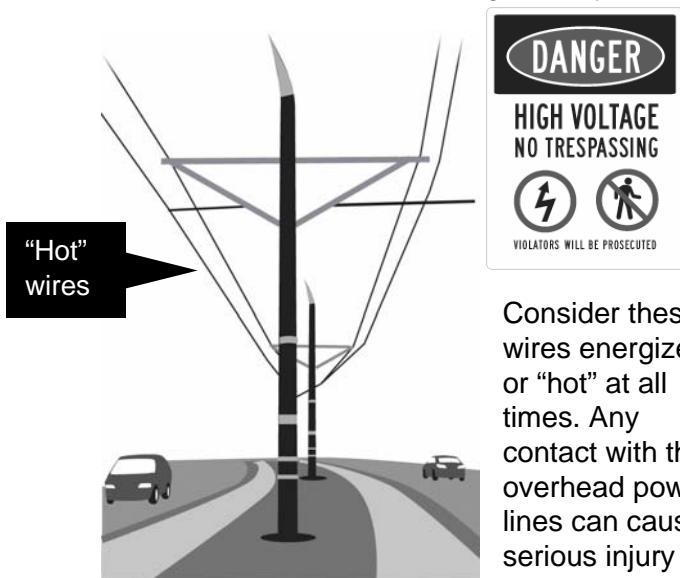

April 2008

Link trains are on the way!

Overhead lines are energized

Link light rail trains are here! And, as Link prepares for testing the new light rail trains, you should be aware of some very important safety precautions.

The overhead electrical lines that power the trains are being suspended above the tracks in the center of Martin Luther King Jr. Way S.

Consider these wires energized or "hot" at all times. Any contact with the overhead power lines can cause serious injury or death. If you see a downed power line, call 9-1-1, stay away, consider it hot and dangerous.

Also, remember to stay off the trackway and out of all construction areas. Crews continue to use the trackway during construction and trains will be coming soon.

For your safety – never enter the trackway area.

Train testing begins this year

Light rail tracks and trains are new and will share streets with cars, buses, motorcycles, bicyclists and pedestrians.

Test trains will begin running on the tracks on MLK Jr. Way South as early as mid-summer of 2008.

Trains will become more frequent as testing continues leading up to passenger service beginning between downtown Seattle and Tukwila in the summer of 2009.

Free shuttle buses will take passengers from the Tukwila International Blvd. Station to Sea-Tac Airport until train service begins running to the airport in late 2009.

Construction is nearly complete on the Link line from downtown Seattle to Sea-Tac International Airport.

Stay Safe & Sound around Link light rail:

- Never touch the train's overhead electrical lines.
- Never throw items or fly kites near overhead electrical lines.
- Never touch a downed power line.
- Never walk, bike, jog or play on the tracks.
- Cross only at designated crosswalks.
- Obey all signs, signals and warning lights.
