Light rail is coming to Northgate in 2021

The Northgate Link Extension adds three new Link Light Rail stations at Northgate, Roosevelt and the U District. When these new stations open in 2021, people will be able to connect to Link at Northgate and enjoy fast, reliable service to downtown Seattle, the University of Washington, Sea-Tac Airport and many more destinations around the region.

Connecting buses to Link light rail

Sound Transit and Community Transit are working together to adjust bus routes so that Snohomish County residents can take advantage of this new transit option. Our ideas include rerouting some bus routes to Northgate, where riders could transfer to the Link Light Rail. There’s room for change as we design routes, and we want your feedback!

Here’s what we are thinking:

- Sound Transit Express bus routes 510, 511, 512, and 513 that currently run between Snohomish County and downtown Seattle would connect to Link at Northgate instead.

- Community Transit bus routes 810, 821, 855, 860, 871, and 880 that currently run to the University of Washington campus would connect to Link at Northgate instead.

- Community Transit bus routes 402, 405, 410, 412, 413, 415, 416, 417, 421, 422, 424, 425, and 435 that serve downtown Seattle will continue to do so.

What are the benefits of riding Link?

From Northgate:
• Get to the University of Washington in six minutes.
• Get to downtown Seattle in 14 minutes.
• Four-car trains, which hold up to 800 people, will run every six minutes during rush hour and travel mostly underground at speeds of up to 55 mph.

More places to go via Link in the future
As approved by voters, Sound Transit is building one of the most robust transit expansions in the country, with new service opening every few years.
